About the Authors

Alan Smithee eschews recitations of his educational credentials in favor of inviting you to read his works and judge for yourself. But the players in his troupe seem happy.

Roderick Robertson lives in a modest home in Milpitas, a small town bravely defending itself from the ravages of Silicon Valley. He works at Intel, a small microchip manufacturer (sort of like Granny Goose: "Crash all you want, we'll make more") as a roustabout and clown. His real life begins outside the walls of The Corporation, however, and he spends his time painting figures, writing things, and playing with the wife and pets — Scaramouche and Lochinvar the dogs, Berengaria the rabbit, and Lucinda, Iolanthe, and Nepenthe the cats. His goal is to win the California Lottery and retire in luxury.

Author's Note

The Mythic Seas is offered not as a complete description of medieval ships, maritime trade, and naval warfare, but rather as a general treatment of those subjects for purposes of weaving interesting tales for Ars Magica. Players who hunger for more detail and realism are strongly encouraged to do their own research and develop systems as simple or complex as they like for the concepts presented here. Just remember: the point is to tell a good story.
